in an anthropologist on mars oliver sacks uses case studies to illustrate the myriad ways in which neurological conditions can affect our sense of self our experience of the world and how we relate to those around us writing with his trademark blend of scientific rigour and human compassion he describes patients such as the colour blind painter or the surgeon with compulsive tics that disappear in the operating theatre patients for whom disorientation and alienation but also adaptation are inescapable facts of life an inexhaustible tourist at the farther reaches of the mind sacks presents in sparse unsentimental prose the stories of seven of his patients the result is as rich vivid and compelling as any collection of short fictional stories independent on sunday now part of the picador collection a series showcasing the very best of modern literature the inspiration for the nbc series brilliant minds from the bestselling author of the man who mistook his wife for a hat fascinating portraits of neurological disorder in which men women and one extraordinary child emerge as brilliantly adaptive personalities whose conditions have not so much debilitated them as ushered them into another reality here are seven detailed narratives of neurological patients including a surgeon consumed by the compulsive tics of tourette s syndrome unless he is operating an artist who loses all sense of color in a car accident but finds a new sensibility and creative power in black and white and an autistic professor who cannot decipher the simplest social exchange between humans but has built a career out of her intuitive understanding of animal behavior sacks combines the well honed mind of an academician with the verve of a true storyteller neurological patients oliver sacks once wrote are travellers to unimaginable lands an anthropologist on mars offers portraits of seven such travellers including a british columbia surgeon consumed by the compulsive tics of tourette s syndrome unless he is operating an artist who loses all sense of colour in a car accident but finds a new sensibility and creative power in black and white and an autistic professor who cannot decipher the simplest social exchange between humans but has built a career out of her intuitive understanding of animal behaviour conversations between two top anthropologists about the intellectual trends in contemporary anthropology and about the discipline s future as it continues to intersect with fields such as science studies this book traces the implicit methodological and epistemic alliances of oliver sacks work with the disciplinary foundations of a seemingly unrelated area that of sociocultural anthropology this is especially important at a time when interdisciplinary and transdisciplinary work has been gradually becoming the canon it is even more so in an era increasingly dominated by automated and artificial intellectual stimulation because the virtues celebrated throughout his work defend a profoundly humanist stance in science medicine education and not least as this book argues anthropology written after a three year period of systematic research the book uncovers the unnoticed similarities between neurological and ethnographic pursuits and offers the reader fresh anthropological readings through the fascinating tales of a great thinker it puts emphasis on the unique prose developed by sacks to communicate his research findings and on the participatory techniques he employed long before these became widespread in the humanities and social sciences
